Unemployment Tips

-Be sure to keep track of the date you start your unemployment claim. This date is important when adding an extension to your work search waiver. You will be asked if you are returning to work by (usually this date is 8 weeks out) you must answer yes even though you may not be returning on that date (usually middle of winter) If you answer no you will automatically be required to do work searches.

-You are allowed to file for 8 weeks without having to do a work search. You can get a 4-week extension by having Human Resources call in the extension.

-You are only allowed a 12-week work search waiver at a time. After 12 weeks you must skip a week and not file with unemployment at all. Then the next week you can file another initial claim and continue your weekly filing for another 8 weeks without having to do work searches. If you work a partial week and it is over $500.00 or 32 hours do not report this to unemployment and just skip that week of filing. The next week you can reset your work search waiver by starting another initial claim and continue filing weekly for another 8 weeks.

-Be sure to pay attention to any eligibility messages when filing your unemployment. You will not get paid till all eligibility issues are taken care of. Many of you are getting messages telling you to sign up for Job Center – this message is different than the work search eligibility message. Just follow the instructions they give you to take care of each eligibility issues when filing your initial claim.

Hopefully this will clear up many questions you may have about the unemployment process, it is sometimes overwhelming trying to navigate the unemployment process.
